About Stephen Lowe

Why did you choose to train at MUSC?

I chose MUSC because of the people. I was very keen to join a residency program where I would fit in well with my co-residents and faculty. We are a tight-knit group who get along well both inside and outside of the hospital. In addition, the clinical experience is outstanding, and everyone here is genuinely interested in my development as a resident. There's never a shortage of cases to do, or a shortage of learning opportunities.

What do you enjoy the most about your residency program?

I enjoy the broad clinical exposure, and the hands-on exposure in the OR. I enjoy that our faculty care about our professional development as well as our well-being and our lives outside of work, and that our physical fitness and mental health are important to the program's leadership. Living in Charleston is very nice, but that goes without saying.

When I'm not at work you can find me ...

Playing ice hockey and golfing. I enjoy trying the many great restaurants that Charleston has to offer. I generally can be found playing squash on Saturday afternoons with my co-residents and attendings. I also enjoy playing guitar and enjoy reading history.
